

WHAT IS AFRICAN SWINE FEVER?

African Swine Fever is a disease only impacting pigs that poses a significant risk to the pork industry and the Canadian economy.

The good news is that ASF is harmless to humans and poses no food safety or public health concerns.

Consumers can feel confident that Canadian pork is safe to eat and enjoy

Thanks to the careful, preventive efforts of the government and pig producers, no case of ASF has occurred in Canada. In fact, there has never been a case of ASF in North America
